A TEDIOUS STORY (from An Old Man s Journal) There lives in Hussia an emeritus professor, Nicolai Stiepanovich . - . privy councillor and knight. He has so many Russian and foreign Orders that when he puts them on the students call him the holy picture. His acquaintance is most distinguished. Not a single famous scholar lived or died during the last twenty-five or thirty yeaTS but he was intimately acquainted with him. Now he has no one to be friendly with, but speaking of the past the long list of his eminent friends would end with such names as Pirogov, Kavelin, and the poet Nekrasov, who bestowed upon him their warmest and most sincere friendship. He is a member of all the Russian and of three foreign universities, et cetera, et cetera. All this, and a great deal besides, forms what is known as my name. This name of mine is very popular. It is known to every literate person in Russia.; abroad it is mentioned from professorial chairs . with the epithets eminent and esteemed. It is reckoned among those fortunate names which to mention in vain or to abuse in public or in the Press is considered a mark of bad breeding. Indeed, it should be so; because with my name is inseparably associated the idea of a famous, richly gifted, and indubitably useful person. I am a steady worker, with the endurance of a camel, which is important. I...
